

The PE Gym is Looking For Editors

We are amping up our quest to bring penile exercising mainstream and publish professional, insightful male sexual health articles to the masses. The next version of our website will have several new articles each week (free, of course), with special features on the latest theories, motivational success stories, and more.

For the first time ever, we're holding open auditions. So if you're interested in helping out and being a part of the fun, fill out the this form. This is a gateway that can lead to more interesting positions at a fast-growing website and publishing company.

We are currently looking for 1-3 editors to:

- Write about the latest topics
- Help turn important posts on our community forums into professional articles
- Interview authors and other important people in the sexual health field (via telephone or email)
- And more (Have an idea on how you can help us improve? Tell us here.)